PAPA DUCK'S ANIMAL CORNER:

GOLDFISH

Goldfish are very popular. They're easy to take care of and are usually healthy.

Did you know that goldfish of a few inches long could grow as long as a foot if they lived out of doors and had plenty of room?

Goldfish can stand a wide range of temperatures but they are most comfortable when it is about 60 degrees.

Oblong tanks are always best for fish, but unlike tropical fish, they can live in a rounded bowl. If you use a jar don't fill it with water beyond its widest part. Be sure plenty of air can get into their container and don't put too many fish in one bowl. Decorations in the water are fine, like bridges and pebbles, but don't crowd the fish.

Japan developed the goldfish into the many kinds that now exist. Goldfish were from China originally. They are members of the carp family of fish.

You might like the goldfish with black or silver or red marks. Some goldfish are stubby with tails that look like frills.

Food for these fish is not expensive.

It is ready-made and comes in several types. Buy a few and give one kind one day and one another. Don't give too much food to goldfish. For a change drop a little liver, roe, crumbled dog biscuit or lettuce into the bowl.

It is easy to raise goldfish. The babies are called fry and they look funny at first, but by six weeks they look like tiny goldfish. As babies they must be fed powdered goldfish food. The baby fish have to be in a separate tank because the older fish eat the young.

Use a magnifying glass to look into your goldfish bowl. You may see jelly-like eggs that have been hatching without you knowing it. Once they hatch the fry (babies) will come to the surface.

The eggs have no color and are as small as pinheads. They hatch in three to six days.

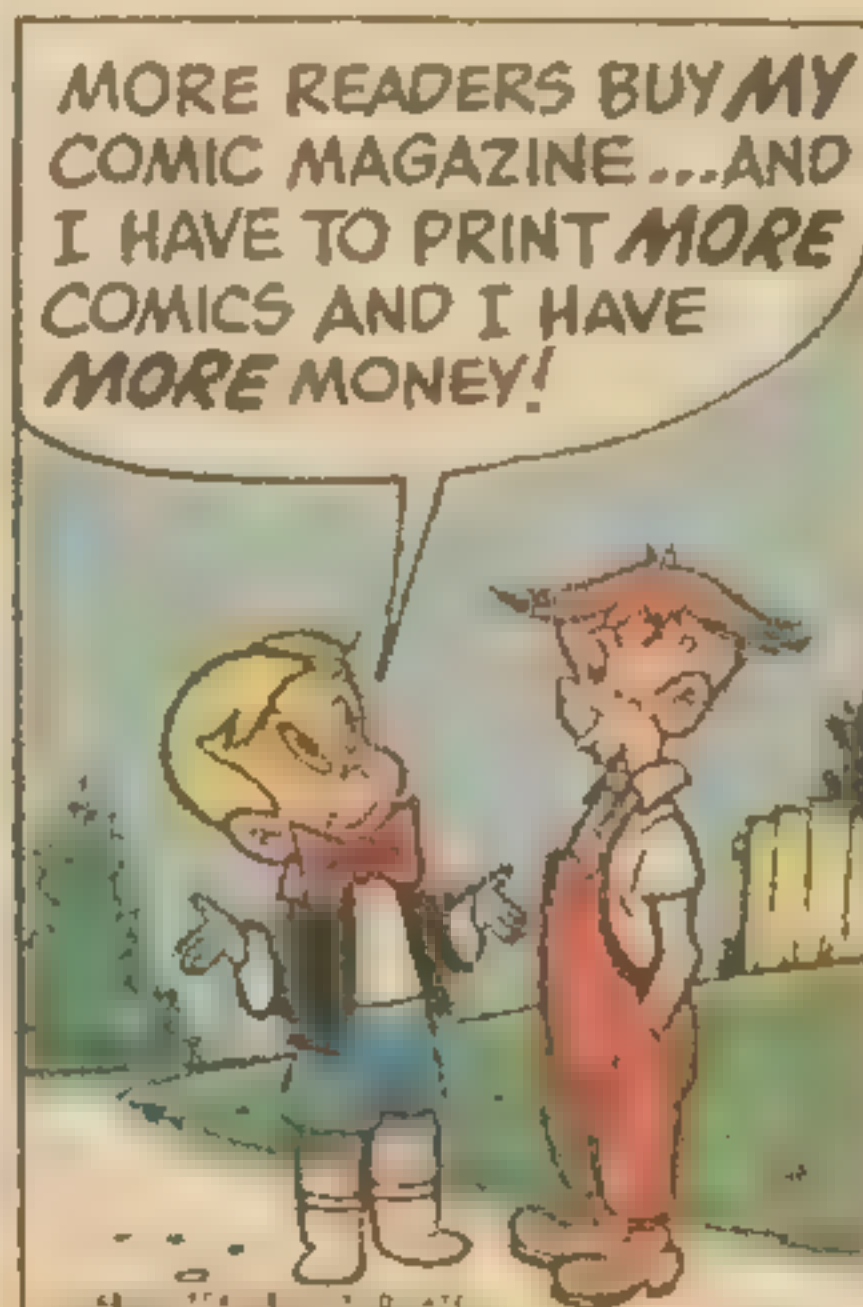

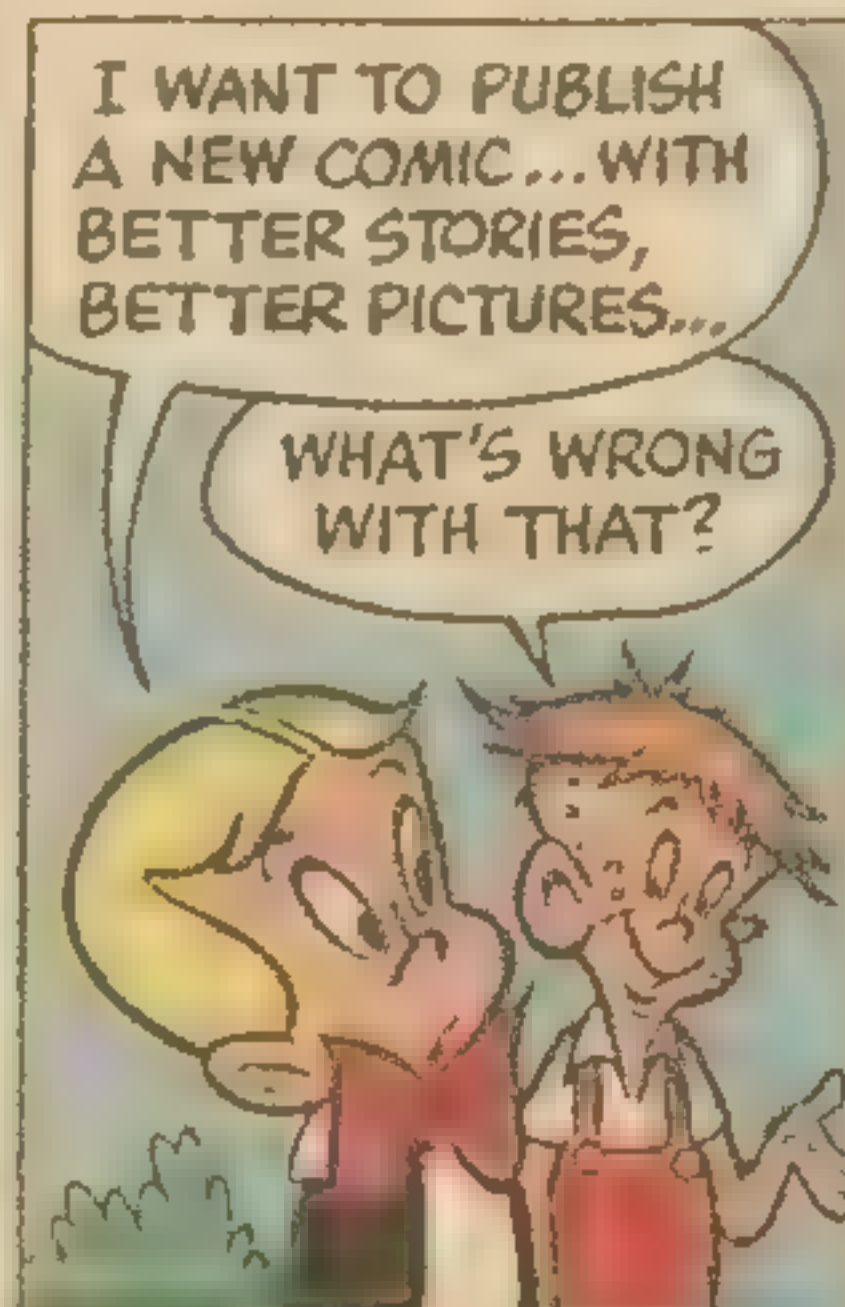

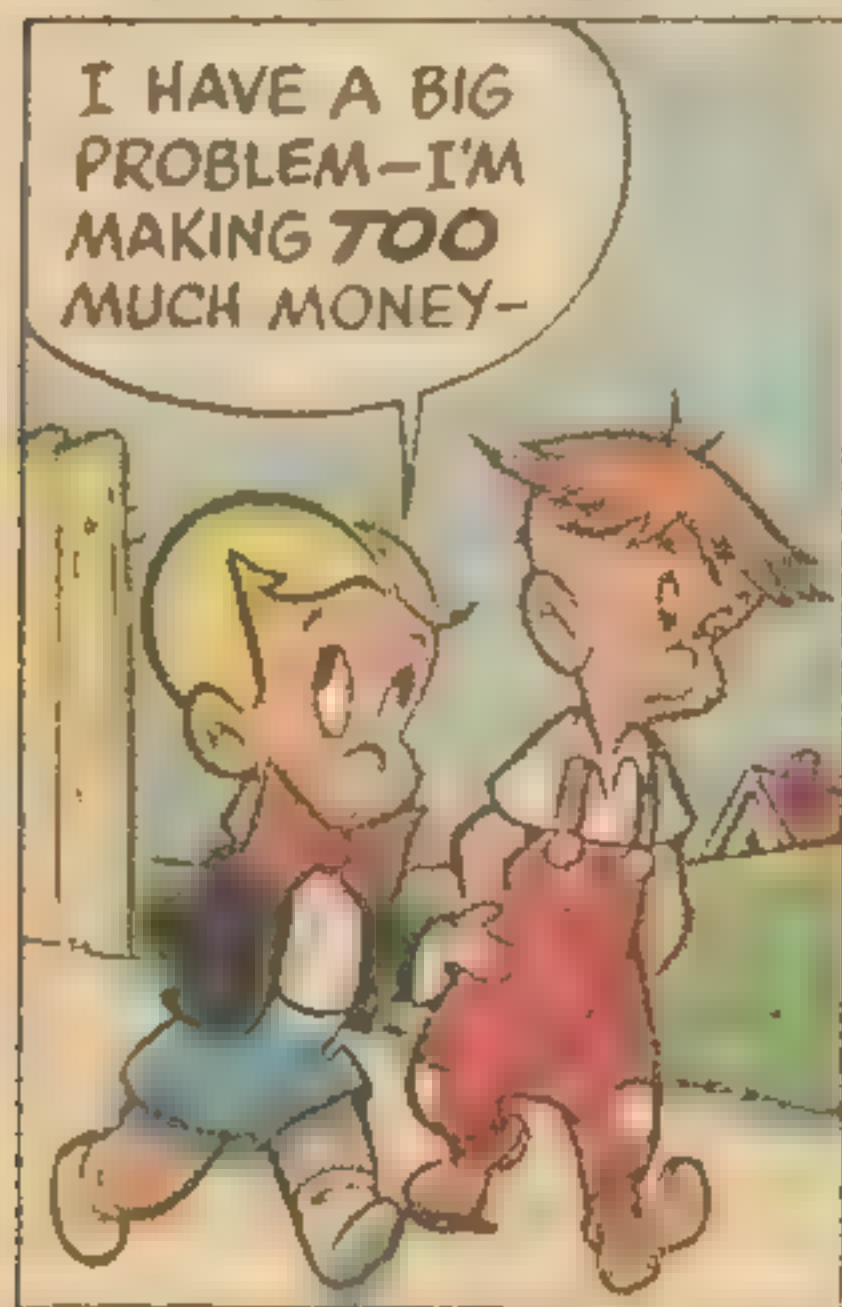

Female goldfish's bodies get big and the males' fins and gills have tiny bumps on them that look like pearls. You must look closely to see these things. These signs mean the fish are ready to lay eggs. The male will chase the female and fertilize her eggs which she scatters as she goes. When all this is done and the male leaves the female alone, you know the whole thing is finished and there must be at least 500 eggs. But not all of them hatch.

Be careful not to place your fish tank on the radiator when it is on or you'll have cooked goldfish.

Keep the bowl in a safe place where it can't be knocked down.

Have fun with your fish, learning their habits, caring for and keeping them.

Richie RICH

SCIENCE CORNER: BOIL AND BUBBLE

Hold a cold plate over boiling water and you will see water drops on it. You don't see water going through the air between the boiling water and the plate, so how does this happen?

The problem is that we think of water as a wet liquid, and of air always as gas. We shouldn't!

Water isn't always a liquid. When it freezes, it becomes solid—ice. Ice is really solid water, if you want to think of it that way. Also, we must remember that when water is hot enough, it becomes like air—a gas. Air does have some water-gas in it all the time. This water-gas is usually called water-vapor. When the weather seems muggy and damp this means there is more water in the air than usual.

Heat is one of the main things which controls whether something shall be solid, a gas or liquid. Heat makes water boil! When extreme heat comes in touch with water it begins to turn into gas. Gas makes the bubbles and then the steam. Bubbles in boiling water are water-gas and when this vapor lands on a cooler surface, like a plate or even a pot cover, it turns into liquid again and is wet.

When you read about the "boiling point," that simply means the certain temperature (amount of hotness) at which water will start to boil. Sometimes, people say they have reached their "boiling point." By that they usually mean that they will lose their temper and can't keep from being angry. Without the use of unusual methods it is not possible to get wet water any hotter than its boiling point.

Air pressure has a lot to do with what temperature will start water boiling. When there is less pressure of air pushing on the water and squeezing it together, so to speak, it can more easily open up (expand) into gas bubbles. Therefore, less heat is needed to make water boil where the air pressure is lower. The higher the land on which you live, the less air there is above you, so, there is less air pressure.

For example, if you went to the top of a high mountain and put an egg in water to boil, you can cook it as long as you like but you can never make the egg really hardboiled. The reason for this is that it isn't possible to get the water hot enough to make the egg as hard as you could make it at sea level.

Do you know why you should use a tea kettle when you want to boil water quickly? The less air that can get into the container (pot) in which you are heating the water the quicker the heat can do its work. And a tea kettle has only a small hole at its spout. So little air gets into a kettle through the spout that the water boils fast.

Now you know what goes on when the water in the kettle boils and bubbles!

IMAGINARY WAR SCENE SHOWN

JEST FOR FUN

The animals of Topsytown had a picnic last month, and there were some funny things that happened there...

Jimmy Squirrel had wanted some pop-corn, but he didn't have any money. So he went to his brother Joe and said, "Gee, Joe, I could use some money to get some pop-corn, but I haven't the faintest idea where to get it."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Joe, "I thought you were going to ask me!"

* * *

When Jimmy finally got the money, he went to the pop-corn man, and asked him for a bag.

"Do you want the five-cent bag or the ten-cent bag," asked the pop-corn man.

"Well, what's the difference?" questioned Jimmy.

"The ten-cent bag costs more!" said the man.

* * *

Quite a few of the raccoons had lined up in front of the custard stand, and the owner was getting angry.

"Scram you raccoons," he told them. "Hit the road!"

Just then Mrs. Duck came walking by. "You shouldn't talk to the little dears that way," she told the owner, "just say 'shoo! shoo!' and you'll be surprised how quickly they'll scam and hit the road!"

* * *

The wise old owl went to the picnic by bus. He went to get his ticket at that big bus terminal in Topsytown.

"I want a round trip ticket," he told the ticket seller.

"Where to?" asked the seller.

"Why, back here, of course," said the wise old owl.

* * *

Peter Porcupine was watching an artist drawing beautiful pictures of the picnic grounds. Finally, he went over to the artist, and said:

"Someone told me that artists are so honest that if you hang your watch on the branch of a tree near them and go away for two weeks, you'll still find it there."

"Of course, that's true," said the artist.

"You mean," said Peter, "when you hang your watch on the tree and come back in two weeks, the watch is still there?"

"No," answered the artist. "The tree is!"

* * *

Stewie Squirrel just had to tell something to his friend, Frankie. He ran up to him, and said:

"Frankie, did you hear that Mrs. Smith's brother went to Buffalo and made fifty thousand dollars in the jewelry business?"

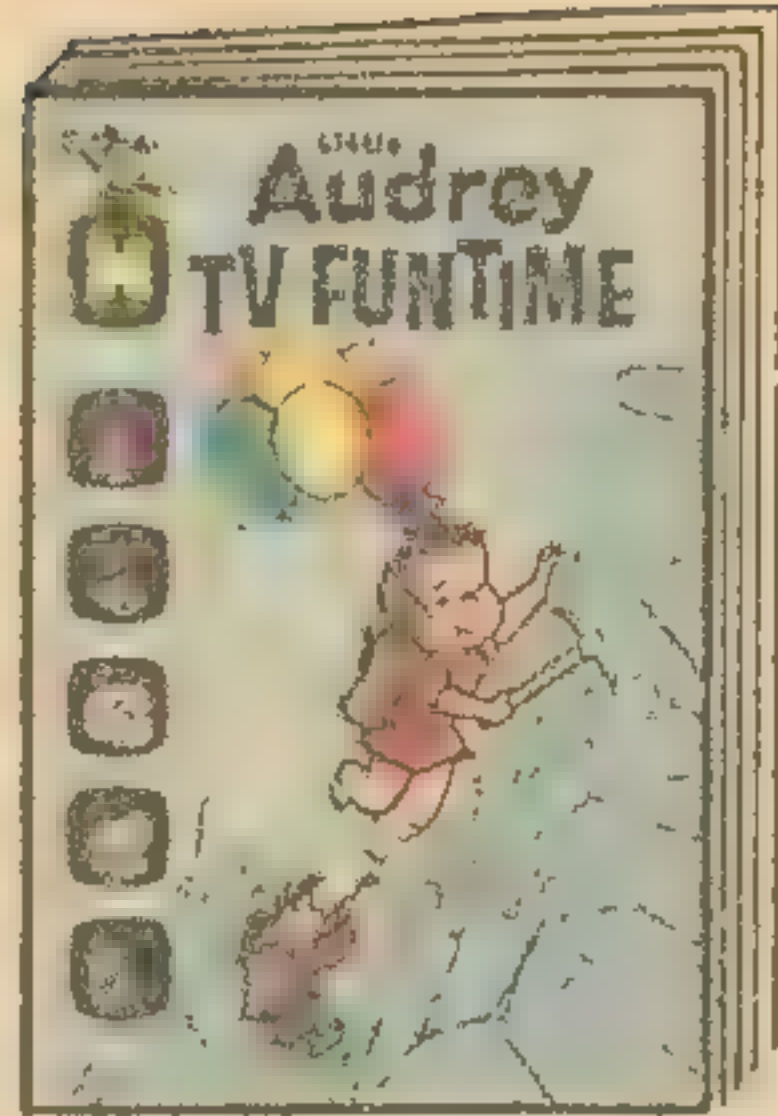

Frankie smiled, and said, "In the first place, it wasn't Mrs. Smith's brother. It was her uncle. Then it wasn't Buffalo, it was Chicago. It wasn't fifty thousand, but ten thousand, and it was the real estate business. And besides, I just finished telling it to you a few minutes ago!"

SCIENCE CORNER: DEEP BLUE SEA

Have you ever heard of Dr. Beebe? He's not just a man with a funny name. Dr. Beebe went half a mile down into the sea and found its strange life and beautiful colors.

What does give the sea its color?

As you know, animals and plants that live on land can be very colorful—the peacock with its beautiful tail, golden skinned lions, red roses and green leaves. Living things in the sea come in lovely colors, too. Large patches of algae, a plant that grows in water and looks like seaweed, live in the water. Some are deep down, others not, but algae can be bright red, pretty blue, or meadow green.

When the sun catches the scales of blue flying fish, red coral and gleaming mackerel, the blend of colors is really an exciting sight. Add rosy sea-anemones to the sea's house of color and all the different plants and types of fish known to live in the water and there are few colors on land that can't be found in the sea.

The sunlight goes as far down in the sea as life goes. Some colors can still be seen deeper into the sea than others. Red looks black about 30 feet under the water, but as much as 700 feet beneath the sea a very unusual blue is the only color left. "The blue is so clear it seems to enclose you in it," said Dr. Beebe.

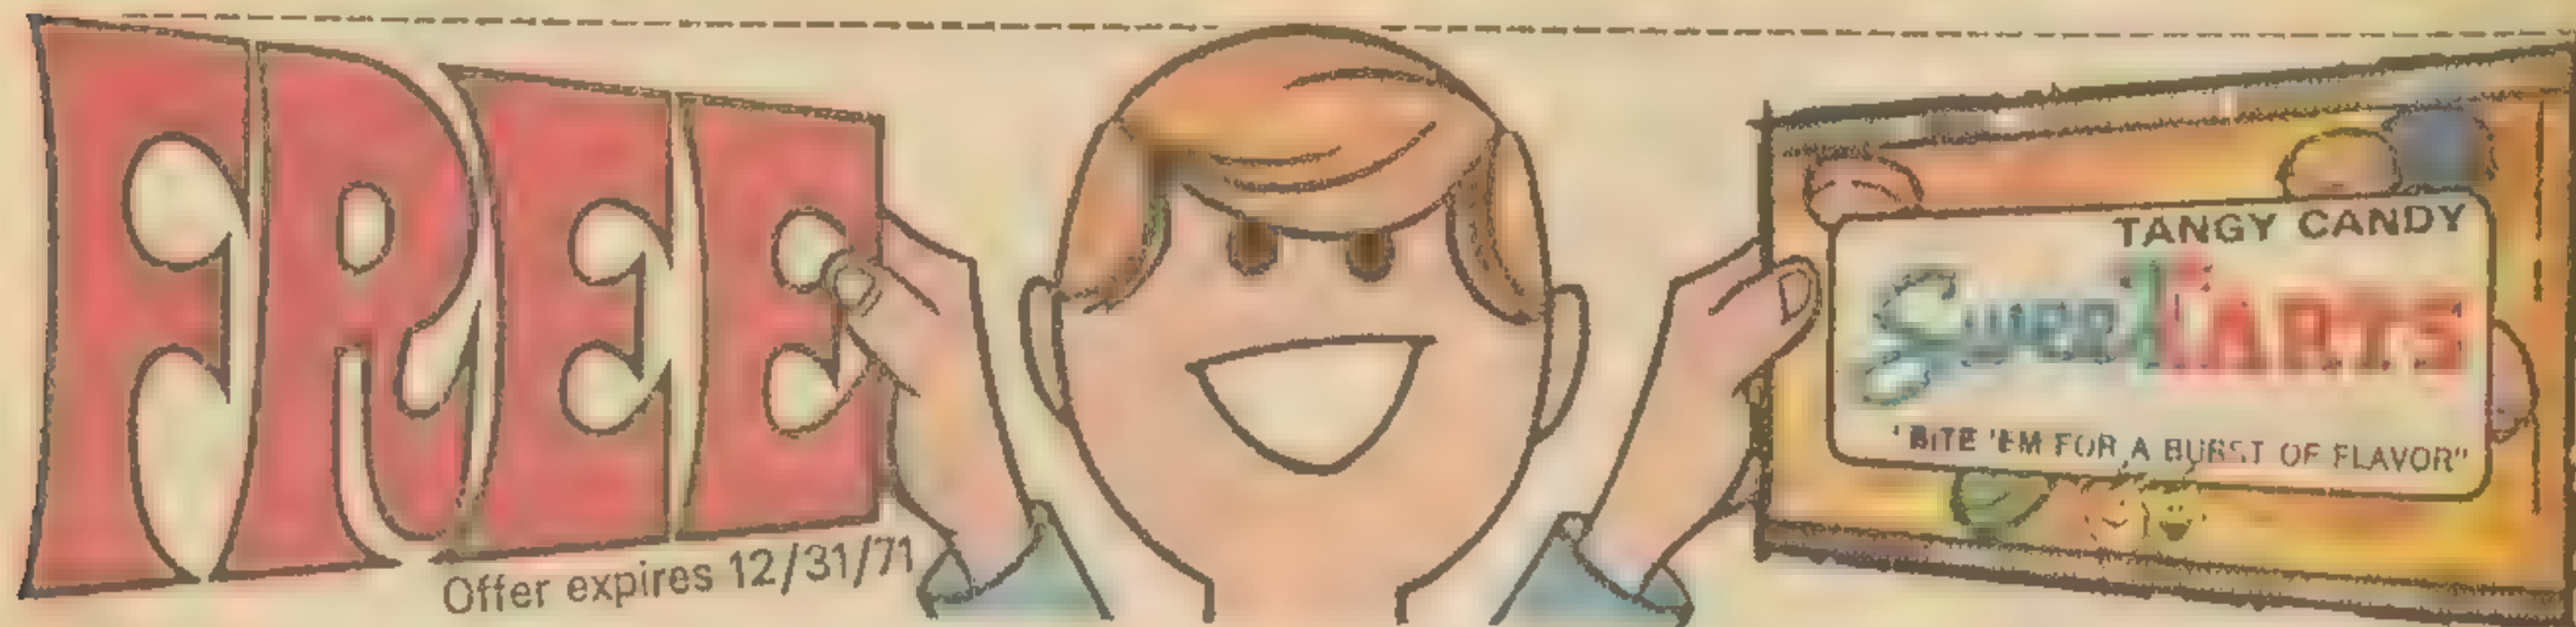

The color we see as we look into the sea is a combination of all these things together. All the life under the sea gives a little bit toward the overall blue or green look that the water has. The reflection of the sky on the water and the sun's rays make the color of the water look more grey or blue or brownish green one day than another. If a lot of sand and dirt is mixed with the water at the top of the sea where you're looking at it, the color seems greyish or brownish.

Even a half mile down in the sea, Dr. Beebe found there was a strange type of light in the blackness.

This light comes from some of the deep sea creatures who carry their own light and parts of their body that supply this light show many forms and colors. Sometimes these lighting parts are held up on a stem or feeler, or set along the side of the animal like a porthole. They might all be of one color or of many.

Dr. Beebe was the first man to see many of these strange creatures in the "bathysphere." The "bathysphere" is a bell-like mechanism that is lowered in to the sea for the purpose of observation and study.

The next time you look at the sea you'll understand what gives it the different colors you see. The secret of the sea won't be so mysterious.
